Voices

23 0 3

Chapter 1 by Chloe

From before I could remember, I had always heard voices. As a child, I had no idea what they were. But then when I got older, I figured it out. Every time I told someone heard them, off we were moving again. Grandma never told me why or how we could do it, but she could do it too. I heard them, but I couldn't hear hers. I heard everyone but her. But she could hear me.

"Cameron, come one! You'll be late." she yelled.

"I'm coming!" I yelled back.

I walked down the creaky stairs of the old house. We have been in Georgia longer than we have been anywhere else. We moved here a year ago. Hopefully we're hear at least until June so I can graduate with people I know.

I walk down the cold street down towards Groves High School and see my 'best friend' Hailey driving in her new 2015 Mustang(baby blue). I say best friend because we both pretty much just use each other. She uses me to make herself look like a good person who will be friends with anyone and I use her to look more popular than I am.

She stops beside me walking down the street.

"Come on! Get in!"

I do.

At school it is worse. So many people and so many thoughts. Though I will admit, it comes in handy when you haven't studied. See more of Story Wars on you when you weren't paying attention.

But when all I can hear is who's planning to break up with whom and who wants to ask whom out, but is to shy. It gets annoying.

It's even worse when I hear what they think about me.

"She's so weird."

"I feel bad for her."

"Do you think she ever speaks?"

"Ewww. Look. Its Cow Girl." That was the most famous ever since I came to school on halloween dressed as a cow(bad idea, I admit)

So yeah...

Being able to read minds sucks.
